BRAND IDENTITY AND MARKETING GUIDE

2022

Purpose

The American Indian Science and Engineering Society (AISES) Brand Identity and Marketing Guide has been created to ensure the professional quality of organizational communications. Our goal is to maintain a cohesive identity internally and externally by promoting consistency in written materials and brand standards. The AISES Brand Identity and Marketing Guide is supplemented by the latest editions of the Associated Press (AP) Stylebook and Merriam-Webster’s Collegiate Dictionary. In cases of conflict, the Brand Identity and Marketing Guide supersedes the AP Stylebook and the AP Stylebook supersedes Merriam-Webster’s Dictionary. When in doubt, contact the AISES Marketing Department.

Name and Logo

The AISES name and logo are important assets, and their use may be administered only in conjunction with the specific requirements set forth in this guide. Exceptions to these requirements must be approved in writing by the AISES Marketing Department.

Website

The AISES website is accessible at www.aises.org. The website is an important public education and marketing tool for the organization and should be mentioned in public education and marketing materials as often as possible. As with all aspects of AISES communications materials, use and design elements of all websites owned and/or managed by AISES must adhere to the requirements set forth in this Brand Identity and Marketing Guide. Exceptions to these requirements must be approved in writing by the AISES Marketing Department.

Logo Design Requirements

The AISES logo consists of the words “American Indian Science and Engineering Society” displayed in specific fonts chosen for the logo. No other fonts may be substituted. No exceptions.

When the AISES logo is used alone, it should be sufficiently isolated from illustrations, photographs, copy, or images that might detract from the logo’s prominence.

Electronic art can be supplied by the AISES Marketing Department as a .PNG, .JPG for websites and electronic applications, or .EPS for print applications.

Reproduction Sizes

Signatures should not be applied in sizes so small that the legibility to reproduction quality is reduced. Each approved color reproduction technique presents certain conditions that will affect its minimum size requirements.

Positive and reverse signatures are limited to a 5/8” corporate signature height. Signatures smaller than 5/8” must be approved by the AISES Marketing Department.

In the reverse signature art rendering, the stroke weight of the logotype is slightly thinner than the positive art to compensate for the visual gain of a reversed image. It is essential that the positive and reverse renderings are used only for their intended applications. Do not make a reverse image using the positive art, or make a positive image using the reverse art.

When designing an application, attention must be paid in selecting either a positive or reverse signature. For the signature to be clearly readable, positive signatures should be used on white or very light background colors. Likewise, reverse signatures should be used only on background colors that are dark enough to provide adequate contrast.

The diagram demonstrates approved positive and reverse reproduction techniques as they apply to a range of background gray scale based on their value. As a general rule, midrange values should be avoided since they are too dark for an effective positive application, but not quite dark enough to provide a crisp white reverse.

Support Design Typestyles and Typography

There are two main fonts — sans serif Myriad Pro and sans serif Century Gothic — for all designed materials, print, and electronic.

Typestyle consistency, particularly on AISES signature application materials, is essential to projecting a cohesive public image and recognizable design style.

These typestyle families have been selected as the primary support design typestyles for the AISES identity system. Shown here is a selection of available styles for Myriad Pro and Century Gothic families. The design standards for AISES materials will designate weights and styles to be used in specific support applications. In other cases, selection of the appropriate typography style within these font families will be left to the discretion of the art director, project manager, or AISES Marketing Department.

Arial or Helvetica type families are recommended when Myriad Pro is not available, and Eurostyle is recommended when Century Gothic is not available.

Terms, Usage, Formalities, and Technicalities

Aboriginal

“Aboriginal” is preferred to “Aborigine.” Always use in reference to people as a noun and adjective, with an initial cap. Like “Native” and “Indigenous,” “Aboriginal” may also be used to refer to the original presence of anything in any region, and in most of these instances it would be lowercase.

acronyms

An acronym is an abbreviation comprising a sequence of initials pronounced as a single word, like “AISES.” Many other abbreviations are initialisms — a sequence of initials pronounced as separate letters, like “FBI.” This guide refers to both as acronyms. In general, acronyms should be spelled out on first reference with the acronym placed in parentheses immediately following only if the acronym used is subsequently in the same document. Refer to the AP Stylebook for the few acronyms that are permissible on first reference.

ad hoc

Refers to groups, committees, boards, and so forth that have been assembled for a limited purpose. It should not refer to actions or decisions. It is not a synonym for “episodic.”

administration

Lowercase (the “Nixon administration”).

adverbs

Do not insert a hyphen after the “-ly” ending of adverbs. (“Federally” and “tribally” are adverbs.) Note that not all words that end in “-ly” are adverbs (“Family” is a noun).

Advisory Councils

There are seven AISES advisory councils:

- Academic Advisory Council (AAC)
- Canadian Indigenous Advisory Council (CIAC)
- Corporate Advisory Council (CAC)

- Council of Elders
- Government Relations Council (GRC)
- Professional Chapter Council (PCC)
- Tribal Nations Advisory Council (TNAC)

affect/effect

“Affect” as a verb means “to influence”; “effect” means “to cause, to bring about.”

AISES

Avoid the apostrophe (trademarks are not properly possessives). Instead use AISES as a descriptor: the AISES mission (not “AISES’ mission”), or with an “of” construction: the work of AISES (not “AISES’ work”).

AISES Annual Report

AISES issues a report that provides an overview of how the organization is run and its current status, including consolidated financial statements as well as its partners, sponsors, and donors and the programs, events, awards, and member benefits that set it apart. The annual report is used in direct mail and other marketing activities.

AISES Headquarters

The Albuquerque office is referred to as AISES Headquarters (abbreviated AISES HQ).

AISES National

The national organization as a whole, as distinguished from subsets like individual chapters, is referred to as AISES National.

Alaska Native

“Alaska Natives” refers to the Indigenous people of Alaska. Not “Alaskan Native” or “Native Alaskan,” which refers to anyone born and raised in Alaska.

American Indian:

Also acceptable are “Native American,” “Native,” and “Indigenous.”

ampersand/&

Spell out ampersands as “and” whenever possible.

blood quantum

The phrase “blood quantum” is acceptable in reference to enrollment credentials. “Full-blood,” “half-blood,” “quarter-blood,” “half-breed,” and “mixed-blood” are not.

Board of Directors

Capped in all references to the AISES Board of Directors, including the shortened form: “the Board.”

brackets

Use square brackets to set off words within quotations that are an editor’s insertions and not part of the actual quote.

C

Canadian miscellany

In Canada a number of Native-specific usages differ from U.S. conventions:

- “Reserve” is the preferred term for “reservation.”
- “Aboriginal” appears in the Canadian constitution, but “Indigenous” is replacing it in popular usage as the preferred term for Native people.

- “Native” is an accepted, though not necessarily preferred, alternative to “Aboriginal.”
- “Indigenous” is used within Canada much as it is used in the United States.
- “First Nation” is the preferred term for a particular Native group or government, comparable to American tribal nations. Note that “First Nations” does not include the Métis Nation or the Inuit; the inclusive abbreviation for Indigenous Canadians is “FNMI.”
- “Indian” is not a preferred term in Canada; never “American Indian.”
- “Band” is more widely used than “tribe.”

capitalization

Capitalize initial words in a sentence, proper nouns, and official names and titles.

Universally identifiable regions should be capped as one word (“Midwest,” “Southwest,” “the South”), but directions of the compass should be lowercase (“continue south two miles”). Generally, do not initial-dates

Use Arabic figures with no letters (-th, -nd,-rd, -st). Spell out months whenever possible and separate elements of dates with commas — January 29, 2020. In a continuing sentence insert a comma after the final element (month or year). Month abbreviations are Jan., Feb., March, April, May, June, July, Aug., Sept., Oct., Nov., Dec. Use the abbreviations only with a numbered day of the month.

diversity, equity, and inclusion

Diversity, equity, inclusion. DEI is acceptable on second reference.

Indian

"American Indian," "Native American," "Native," and "Indigenous" are preferred.

Indian Country

Capitalize both words on this legal designation signifying lands under U.S. jurisdiction within the exterior boundaries of reservations and lands considered "dependent Indian communities." "Indian Country" can be applied to reservations and Alaska Native villages alike, but note that lands held by Alaska Native corporations are not "Indian Country" in the same sense as in the lower 48 states. The term does not apply to Hawaii, U.S. possessions, or any non-U.S. jurisdiction.

Indigenous

Use this term, capitalized, when referring to Native people. It is an adjective, so “Indigenous people(s).” Avoid attempted nouns such as “Indigenes” or “the people/peoples

“Peoples” implies sovereign nationality, whereas “people” implies a more casual association. Use the term “Native peoples” where the distinction should be made, or as a term of respect. In general, “Native peoples” is preferred, but “Native people” can be used where it seems more appropriate, as in referring to a small number of Native people who are engaged in everyday pursuits, like attending a powwow.

percent/percentages

“Percent” is one word, always spelled out; the quantity is never spelled out even when less than 10 (“6 percent”; “60 percent”). Reserve the percent sign (%) for tables, columns, and charts. Quantities less than one should be preceded by a leading zero (“0.81 percent”).

Commonly conveyed through a will or trust and arranged as part of an individual’s estate planning, these gifts typically amount to a major future donation in the form of cash, equities, or property. Questions about arranging a planned gift should go to the director of individual giving.

For common and proper nouns ending in “s,” use only the possessive apostrophe (“Nora Mapes’ cat,” not “Mapes’s”).

titles Titles of organizations or organized groups should be capitalized on first reference and subsequent reference if the entire formal title is used again. Subsequent references that are shortened are lowercase (the Northern Cheyenne Tribal Council becomes “the council” or “the tribal council”).

Professional titles of individuals should be capitalized when they appear before the name as part of the name (Secretary of Defense Ashton Carter), but lowercased when they follow the name (Ashton Carter, secretary of defense). Titles may be abbreviated only with the person’s full name. (Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower; General Eisenhower). Titles that appear without the name or in apposition to the name (not set off by a comma) are lowercase (“the beloved queen Elizabeth II”).

Do not capitalize occupational titles (the astronaut John Herrington, the musician Shelley Morningsong, former president and peanut farmer Jimmy Carter).

Terms denoting positions of tribal leadership are capped with or without the individual’s name: Principal Chief; Tribal Governor.

Courtesy titles like “Ms.” and “Mr.” should appear only in correspondence.

titles of publications, creative work
Use double quotation marks around minor titles: unpublished documents and published essays, newsletter articles, newspaper articles, magazine articles, policy position papers, research papers, songs, episodes of TV series.

Use italics for titles of books, journals, magazines, newspapers, newsletters, works of art, films, and plays.

Names of court cases are italicized, but official names of specific legislation are not.

Titles of standard reference books like dictionaries are always in plain text, as are the Bible, the Koran, the Book of Mormon, and any other scriptural volume of an established religion.

Do not overuse as a synonym for “method” or “venue.”

trademarks
Capitalize trademarks but lowercase any preceding articles (a, an, the); treat shortened forms of the name as you would any common noun; replace internal asterisks, etc., with a hyphen; and drop stylized typographic elements (“the Ford Foundation” and “the foundation,” not “The Ford Foundation” or “the Foundation”; “E-Trade”, not “E*Trade”; “Yahoo”, not “Yahoo!”)

tribal leadership

Titles denoting tribal leadership are always capped, with or without a leader’s name (Principal Chief; Governor).

Tribe

Capitalize as part of an official name, but the “Rosebud Sioux Tribe” becomes the “tribe” on subsequent reference.

underscoring

In general, do not underscore, with the rare exception of direct mail.

well-being

-wide

The suffix is closed on words listed that way in Webster’s, but otherwise hyphenated (“nationwide”; “reservation-wide”).

widows/orphans

These terms describe single words or short lines standing alone at the bottom (orphan) or top (widow) of pages or columns in a layout. Avoid them.
